Shop Santa Cruz Downtown 2020

Due to restrictions brought on by COVID-19, downtown businesses have been seeing much slower traffic and the reality is that this holiday season will be make-or-break for many of them. For the sake of local jobs, local tax revenue that funds important services and the hope for a return to a thriving local economy, community support will be key this holiday season.

We can each make a big difference in our community simply by making the choice to shop local. With a variety of stores and restaurants to choose from, you are sure to find a gift for everyone on your list.

Many of our downtown businesses are owned and operated by Santa Cruz families, employing Santa Cruz locals. When you spend money downtown, you are keeping your neighbors' businesses open, supporting local employees and our small town's resilience, while positioning Santa Cruz to thrive. In other words, it feels good to shop local! Our downtown shops and restaurants offer safe environments with social distancing guidelines in place. You can make purchases in-store, through curbside pickup and online at many locations.

Don't know what to gift? You can show your love for Santa Cruz with Downtown Dollars and give it all including retail, dining, movies, salons and so much more.

Downtown Dollars can be purchased at Bookshop Santa Cruz, the Downtown Information Kiosk or Pacific Cookie Company all season long.

Despite the pandemic, you and your family will still find fun and festive things to do in Downtown Santa Cruz, including special Shop Santa Cruz 2020 promotions, virtual events, giveaways and more.

60 Stories about 30 Seconds

by Bruce Van Dusen

Time to take care of business.

You know you've got three minutes or more, plenty of time to leave the sofa, run to another part of the house quick, cruise through the kitchen for a snack, and you're back before your program restarts. Unless your ads are running, you might otherwise grab the remote and zap past the break, but read "60 Stories about 30 Seconds" by Bruce Van Dusen and you'll be flush with information.

His parents wanted him to be a doctor.

Young Bruce Van Dusen wasn't interested in medicine, though; he'd spent his childhood messing around with an 8mm camera, making short movies with his friends. At fifteen, he offered to "intern" at the photography studio owned by a distant relative, further sealing his interest; while he didn't actually do much that summer except read magazines and help with the occasional photo-shoot, by time he went back to school, he was hooked.

When it came to college, there were few choices then; most of the "film schools" taught more critical skills, less hands-on, so Van Dusen chose to attend Boston University. There, he made movies but after he witnessed the making of a TV commercial, he saw his future.

At age 22, Van Dusen started a film company and began hustling for work.

For the first many months, he worked for a pittance, hoping that word-of-mouth and a great reputation would eventually pay his rent. He bid against competitors that he'd one day outlast, filming with big egos, small stars, and people who were both.

Through the years, he'd work for himself, with a partner, and with a big company that assumed the risk and worry. To be successful, Van Dusen says, take responsibility for your people and never sue your biggest customer. As for TV ads, remember that they're trend-driven, and that the best parts are often rejected in editing. When in business, don't assume anything, keep your family close, and never stand behind a female lion.

Oh, my, but there's a lot of swagger inside "60 Stories about 30 Seconds." It shouts from nearly every page and sometimes, it's rather offputting. The one thing that's worse are the short sentences. Short. Constantly short. Half-thoughts. Hard to read. Not easy.

If you can look past the fact that most of the sixty (plus) stories aren't about TV commercials, and you don't mind that the ones that are TV-related can tend to be dated, you'll eventually find author Bruce Van Dusen's biography, which is interesting and varied but also somewhat dated. Van Dusen won awards for his work, and he made films with some of Hollywood's best.... thirty or forty years ago. Ad-making technology has overwhelmingly advanced since then; still, many of those short vignettes are enjoyable enough to seek out.

As for business readers, there are nuggets here, and still-relevant advice on TV ads, but you'll have to search for both while you're reading "60 Stories about 30 Seconds." If you haven't the patience for that, though, then just zap past it.
