UCSC Announces the 2025 Chancellor's Innovation Impact Award Recipients

UC Santa Cruz has announced the recipients of its 2025 Chancellor's Innovation Impact Awards, and this year's honorees highlight just how much meaningful work is happening across the Monterey Bay region. From coastal resilience to brain-computer interfaces to forensic genomics, the projects recognized all share one thing: real-world impact. The awards span four categories: Innovator of the Year went to Mike Beck, director of UCSC's Center for Coastal Climate Resilience. His work focuses on measuring how natural ecosystems like mangroves, coral reefs, and wetlands reduce flood and storm risk. By putting economic value on these natural defenses, Beck is helping governments and insurers take nature-based solutions seriously as alternatives to traditional infrastructure. Translation of the Year was awarded to NeuroSWARM3, a neurophotonic technology developed in the Yanik Lab and led by Ahmet A. Yanik. The platform allows for wireless, minimally invasive monitoring of brain activity at scale. It's now moving toward commercialization through a partnership with neurotechnology company Subsense, Inc. Lifetime Achievement honors went to Richard E. Green, a professor of Biomolecular Engineering whose work in paleogenomics helped define an entire field. His contributions were central to the research recognized in Svante Pääbo's 2022 Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine, with Green co-authoring four of the six key papers cited. His work has also led to several startups rooted in Santa Cruz, including Astrea Forensics and Dovetail Genomics. Community Changemaker was awarded to Bud Colligan, a longtime advocate for regional economic growth. As a founding board member of Santa Cruz Works, Colligan has helped shape the local innovation ecosystem, drawing on his experience from Silicon Valley, including leadership roles at Apple and as CEO of Macromedia. His efforts have focused on building a more inclusive and resilient economy across the region.

There's also a meaningful connection here. In 2023, Santa Cruz Works was the inaugural recipient of the Community Changemaker Award. Seeing Colligan recognized two years later feels fitting, given his role in helping launch and guide the organization from the beginning. Congratulations to these honorees! They will be celebrated at a gathering on May 7th. Learn more at <https://news.ucsc.edu/>

The War Within a War: The Black Struggle in Vietnam and at Home

by Wil Haygood

Uncle Sam needs you.

He has work for you, a steady job that may be the most difficult thing you'll ever do but you'll gain pride in your accomplishments and decent pay for the work, plus three hots and a cot. Hey, it's a great opportunity to gain on-the-job experience – even if, as in the new book “The War Within a War” by Wil Haygood, you once might've experienced racism, too.

Dan Bullock was a boy who'd always dreamed of becoming a Marine.

And so he did, and after graduating from basic training, he was sent to Vietnam to fight. Sadly, Dan was asleep one night in May of 1969, when a Vietcong soldier threw a grenade into the tent where he lay. Dan Bullock was killed instantly. Wallace Terry knew about Bullock, and he couldn't stop thinking about him.

Terry was one of a handful of Black journalists in Vietnam, and he'd heard bitter talk and hot anger from Black troops - talk of discrimination, of terrible assignments, of seeing greater danger than white soldiers saw. Black young men enlisted in the military because opportunities for them were scarce at home. Once in Vietnam, they'd become political-savvy and smart about current events, hoping things might get better in America but knowing, down-deep, that nothing would.

Though the American military had been officially integrated for years, what Terry heard was that Black soldiers felt like Vietnam was a “war within a war.” Many said that race didn't seem to matter in combat. At base camp and from their superiors, there was the problem. In the meantime, President Lyndon Johnson signed bills to help the poor but his policies didn't stop racism or the war itself.

By wars' end, more than 58,000 American soldiers died in Vietnam.

One of them was Dan Bullock, who wasn't sixteen, as he'd told the Marine recruiter. As Terry learned, Dan was fourteen when he enlisted, fifteen when he died, the youngest American soldier to perish in Vietnam...

It's not on there, but “The War Within a War” should have a Trigger Warning sticker on the cover. If you're a veteran of combat, you should know that before proceeding.

Using the stories of dozens of people who went to Vietnam in various ways and for myriad reasons, author Wil Haygood offers tiny stories and a window to American warfare that often goes unknown. Here, you'll meet the Common Man and those who were quite uncommon, brave women who played parts in history, and entertainers who raised consciousness through music. You can smell the jungle here. You'll feel the heat and hear the sudden, terrifying silence as you read this must-read, highly relevant, heart-break of a book.

Just beware: it's sometimes very graphic and certain readers might want to skip it, even though it's one of the better books you'll find on the subject. Absolutely, if you're unfamiliar with or want to know more about this part of American history, “The War Within a War” is a book you need
